

HAMMAM QUADERNA

ABSTRACT

HAMMAM QUADERNA inscribes itself in long-lasting research about contemporary thermal space. Since the Romans, thermae have been the most shared spaces of the city, devoted to absorbing a large part of public life while allowing access to all social classes. A previous step of our research has been the temporary transformation of the Maldiere bus stop in Lausanne into a steam bath open to the public. In 1972 Zanotta produced the Quaderna Serie, designed by Superstudio. A number of modular furniture, called Istograms, populated a democratic landscape, aimed to free the action of its inhabitants. Our exercise aims to reweave the continuity of public and thermal space, thing out the space with separate intimacy and community. QUADERNA will be the base to design and construct new hammam modules.
